Qualifying for Social Security Disability

In many of our agency's publications, we refer to Social Security Disability Insurance benefits as SSDI. What's a bit ironic is that SSA employees rarely use the term "SSDI;" rather, we say "Title 2." This is a reference to Title 2 of the Social Security Act, which authorizes retirement, survivors, and disability benefits. Our other benefit program, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), is called "Title 16" because that's where it's found in the Act.

Now let's look at how to qualify for Title 2 Disability. You must have worked in jobs covered by Social Security, and have a medical condition that meets our strict disability definition. We pay only for total disability; no benefits are payable for partial or short-term disability. We consider you to have a qualifying disability under our rules if these two requirements are met:

*** Because of your condition, you cannot work at a substantial level, and you cannot do the work you did previously or adjust to other work. We generally use earnings guidelines to evaluate whether your work activity is "substantial." If you are working and your earnings average more than $1,550 monthly ($2,590 if you're blind), you generally can't be considered disabled.

*** Your condition has lasted or is expected to last for at least one year or to result in death.

If you file a claim and meet these requirements, we send your application to a Pennsylvania Disability Determination Services (DDS) office that will determine if your condition is severe enough to qualify medically. DDS will go through a sequence of steps before making a final decision. This usually takes about three to four months.

If your application is approved, the local SSA office will take action to start your benefits. If you are denied, you have 60 days to appeal the decision.

Cherry Pie, Presidents & Social Security

As we get ready for Presidents Day, the question is ... Did a six year-old George Washington really cut down his father's cherry tree? Well, since we cannot tell a lie, we're going to keep that to ourselves and instead just think about enjoying the traditional pie of the holiday. So, as we await February 19, let's look at the "sweet" things that took place during the administrations of other presidents re Social Security. (This is a SSA newsletter, after all!)
